Talk Outline:

It is a common scenario faced by many practitioners of family law, where clients found themselves in a quandary despite having been granted a court order in their favour. Many were unable to assert their rights, especially during the COVID-19 pandemic.

This talk will give an overview of the application for an order of committal, and highlight common pitfalls to avoid – whether acting for the applicants or the alleged contemnors. While the examples will be from the area of Family Law, the procedural session is of general application in civil matters.

About the speaker Matt Wong Chong Ee practises at Matt Wong & Co, where his principal areas of practice are contentious matrimonial matters and proceedings involving children. He serves on the Bar Council's Family Law and Mediation Committees, and the state bar's sub-committees. He enjoys conducting trainings and workshops on family law, and hopes to see discourse and development in the local family law scene. Matt is a mediator, collaborative practitioner and a HRDF certified trainer. He also taught at a local college.
