About speaker-SARASWATHY SHIRKE DEO

started her career as principal lecturer in law in 1999. She has lectured law students in several local law colleges and university colleges. Her subjects of expertise are Constitutional & Administrative law, Tort, Contract law, Medical law, Employment law, Company law, Cyber law and Media law. She has lectured these subjects in both the UK and Australian law programmes. After leaving academia, she pursued practice of law in 2013 under leading litigators, putting her knowledge in substantive law to handle civil litigation. She also assisted in research and submissions for mainly appellate matters where her experience and expertise in academia were useful. She further gained insights by assisting in trial court litigation and she has conducted several challenging civil trials on her own in her primary years of practice. She currently practices under her own boutique law firm focusing exclusively on the line of substantive areas of law that she has lectured. She has published several articles in law journals for over a decade. She also gives lectures and talks on subjects of her interest with her characteristic engaging style, delivering complicated concepts in a crisp and simple manner.
